NEW YORK, March 15.—New York, the financial heart of the na-tion, throbbed more rapidly today as on federal income taxes.

By midnight, the final minute for making returns, Father Knicker-bocker's pulse beat its way above normal and it was reflected in the throbbing heads of his sons and daughters who in the last few days had been forced to brush up on their lost art of arithmetic. "Big Bill" Edwards, collector of internal revenue, and his staff, admitted tonight that they were wearied accepting money. But they were not too weary to hazard a prediction that when the final penny was counted, it would be found that more people had paid income taxes here this year than ever before, but that they had turned in smaller amounts to their Uncle Sam.

After worrying, fussing, perspiring, setting up late at nights, losing sleep, temper and about everything else, trying to figure out your income tax, how would you like to find, after all this, after days yes maybe months of worry and nerve provoking labor that the total amount you had to pay was a mills? How would you? Would you survive it?

You say H can't happen, but it did, and right here in Tules. And as far as is known it is the amailest income tax paid. And to make mailers worse it all happened to a young and very good looking woman.

pened to a young and very good looking woman.

With troubled eyes she walked into the tax collector's office in the federal building, late Monday night and asked aid in figuring out her income tax report. After an hour of answering questions and figuring, she finally mostered up courage to make a few queries herself. And then when it was all over. "Madam, you owe first exactly 8 mills," one of the slaves of the pencil told her. "What," she gasped, only 8 mills. And you spend an hour finding it out—and me, well I've spent several hours worrying." hours worrying."

And with a gasp of relief, she opened her pure, paid the col-lector h cent, and with a much lighter tread than when she entered the office, made her exit.

Through co-operation in the Use cersity of Tulsa by the Presbyterian institution and the Methodist college to be located on the same campus, the forces of the Presbyterian church and the M. E. church south. will combine in the cause of Christian education, following an agreement reached by representatives of both churches Tuesday after negotia-tions which have for some time been pending.

The seal was set upon a plan which will draw the eyes of all educators of America this way and which will make it possible for the University of Tulsa to become one of the leading institutions of higher learning in the country, when representatives of the two churches phased late yeareday afternoon from resentatives of the two churches phassed late yesterday afternoon from the office of Judge V. I. Williams, who drew up the document. There will be no other institution like it in the United States and a similar foundation will be found only in Oxford university in England and the University of Toronto, Canada. In pioneering such a project for Christian educational co-operation in America, this city will gain fresh distinction.

in Her Story Told From Witness Stand. Clara on the Witness Stand Re-lives Memorable Horrors

But He Took the Gun; "I Hated Him But Loved

Him More," Says Girl Who Mourns Hamon

By B. A. BRIDGEWATER World Staff Correspondent.
ARDMORE. March 15.—Clara Smith Hangon made her pica to the jury today. It was undoubtedly an appeal that had been prepared and studied with great care and it was effectively made. During the long four-hour period that are spent on the witness stand the pretty detendant, and she did appear pretty loday, addressed herself almost exclusively to the 42 men who have been selected to decide whether she is to be condemned or congratulated.

If movie cameras had been clicking today every minute she sat in the witness chair, or if the densely packed and eager crowd of specta-tors that filled every available foot of space in the room had been theater patrons and the court chamber a playhouse, her polse could not have been more precise.

She registered all the emotions. She wept just at the right moment, and scores of women sympathizers in the audience wept with her

She smiled shyly, sometimes sadly, and at other stages she emphasized the proper words and someness, then passed swiftly over other sections. She seemed to re-live in memory the horor of hours when she said her lover, Jake Hamon, heat her and bruised her and twisted her fingers in a drunken frenzy. Then she would seem creaptured as she told "How sweet and kind he was," and how terribly much she loved him in other hours when he was not drunk.

Making no effort to deny that for ten years she was the oil king's mistress, she seemed cather to be proud to tell of holding his love. Her eyes glowed as she told of their improper relations on trains and in hotels in cities all over the United States, as well as in their two-room apartment at the Randol hotel in Ardmore.

Her most difficult moment on the witness stand came when she

Her most difficult moment on the witness stand came when she was describing the fragedy she said occurred in her room, not in his as the state contends. After the pistol had been fired, accidentally, she said, when Hamon struck her with a chair, he told her he was hit but she couldn't believe it. He unbuttened his vest and opened it and she saw a circle of red rapidly growing larger.
